The Same, but Different?

Monarchical Rule and Representation in the Hellenistic World

Edited by Christoph Michels
with Hans Beck and Achim Lichtenberger

Studies in Ancient Monarchies | 11

When Hellenistic kingship – with its ‘charismatic’, to some extent even excessive character – emerged in the wake of Alexander, it was perceived already by contemporaries as something genuinely new. This can be observed above all in the reception of central symbolic forms of expression and practices by non-Macedonian rulers. However, scholars have also emphasized the multifaceted nature of monarchical rule in the Hellenistic age. On the one hand, important impulses for the monarch’s persona came from the culture-specific reasons for obedience (Weber) on the part of his respective subjects. On the other hand, the development of a monarchical habitus was shaped by the specific configuration of the multipolar Hellenistic world system: royal competition was carried out as one among peers, before a public that was in essence culturally Greek. The studies collected in this volume focus on the development of concepts of rule and ideologemes as well as the cross-fertilization between the Hellenistic dynasties and in conversation with local traditions of rule. Finally, the authors address the question as to what extent the coming of Rome brought about a turning point for monarchical representation.

An Undertakers’ Archive from the Kynopolite Nome

(P. Kynopolites)

G. BAETENS & W. CLARYSSE

This book provides a comprehensive edition of five well-preserved Greek papyri from an archive of undertakers (nekrotaphoi) from the late Ptolemaic Kynopolite nome, four of which unpublished. The texts contain a wealth of information on mummification practices and funerary taxation in this era, in particular concerning the use of the embalming products kedria (Egyptian sfy) and pharmakon (Egyptian phr.t), the traditional seventy-day funerary period, and a mummification procedure in which bodies are temporarily buried in the sand. All this and more is discussed in an extensive commentary combining Greek and Egyptian evidence.

Conservé à l’Institut français d’archéologie orientale (IFAO) du Caire, le P.Fouad inv. 218 appartient au même rouleau (datable paléographiquement de la fin du I^{er} siècle de notre ère) que l’« Empédocle de Strasbourg » (P.Strasb. gr. inv. 1665-1666 = Mertens-Pac³ 356.11). Il contient les restes, plus ou moins mutilés, de 30 vers nouveaux des Physica, répartis sur deux colonnes: dans la première, il est question, selon l’interprétation défendue dans le présent volume, des effluves; dans la seconde, des perceptions sensorielles.

Edizioni dell’Istituto Papirologico «G. Vitelli»

The series publishes editions of papyrus texts from Greek, Roman, and Byzantine antiquity, as well as essays and studies on specific topics in literary and documentary papyrology. It carries on a tradition over a century old, which began with the Società Italiana per la ricerca dei papiri greci e latini in Egitto (1908–1927) and has been continued by the Papyrological Institute.

Since 2013, eighteen volumes have been published, including four in 2024.

All books in the series undergo peer review and fully embrace Open Access publishing as a key means of sharing ideas and knowledge across research fields, with a collaborative and non-profit spirit. The series ensures both high research impact and rapid dissemination in any editorial format.

Authors are kindly invited to submit proposals and/or full manuscripts to the series editors, francesca.maltomini@unifi.it and guido.bastianini@unifi.it.

CORPUS DEI PAPIRI FILOSOFICI GRECI E LATINI

TESTI E LESSICO NEI PAPIRI DI CULTURA GRECA E LATINA

The project «Corpus of Greek and Latin philosophical Papyri: Texts and Lexicon» (CPF) has been running since 1983: it aims to collect the papyri discovered in Egypt from Greco-Roman times preserving Greek and Latin texts concerning philosophy. Starting from the Hellenistic age and continuing to the end of the Roman age, the CPF collects in Part I the philosophical texts on papyrus of known authors (most of them covered by medieval transmission), provided with biographical and doxographical references. Alongside these are also included fragments of authors not strictly considered as ‘philosophers’ in the modern history of philosophy but deemed in antiquity to have had an influence on the field of philosophy, such as Isocrates and Galen (see vol. I.2) and Xenophon or Plutarch (I.2, forthcoming). A specific volume was dedicated to Commentaries, an important genre in philosophy. Volumes of Part II.2 and II.3 are devoted to papyrus fragments of the so-called ‘gnomic’ literature – moral maxims and precepts that lie on the borderline between philosophy and educational tools. This genre was highly significant in the context of secondary education and spiritual training in antiquity. Sixteen volumes have appeared so far (including indexes and plates). Part II.1: Unattributed Fragments is currently being prepared (three volumes have been published so far, and an equal number will be needed to complete it); This part deals with philosophical fragments classified in papyrological repertoires as ‘philosophical’, but not immediately assignable to an author. The most important schools of antiquity are involved. This section offers a comprehensive collection that has never before been attempted – neither in papyrology nor in the field of ancient philosophy – and thus provides an unique overview of the philosophical content preserved on papyrus. To date a total of 56 texts have been published in these three volumes: they account for more than half of the texts to be included in this section of the CPF. These three volumes provide new editions – often yielding fresh insights and always accompanied by detailed commentaries – of papyrus fragments held in various papyrological collections. Some of these texts had already appeared in the volumes of the series Studi e Testi per il Corpus dei Papiri Filosofici, and are now republished in the CPF, either by the original editors or by other scholars, with updates and a critical reassessment in light of the scholarly debate that has since developed.

STUDI E TESTI
PER IL CORPUS DEI PAPIRI
FILOSOFICI GRECI E LATINI

Since 1985, a dedicated series of studies has been launched to explore specific topics in greater depth and to publish annotated editions of individual fragments. These often stem from more detailed analyses of papyri already included in the Corpus dei Papiri Filosofici (CPF), where they had originally been presented with only brief commentary. In this series, titled «Studi e Testi per il Corpus dei Papiri Filosofici» (STCPF), eighteen volumes have been published so far. Since the first one (STCPF, 1 with the new edition of P. Paris 2, Peri apophatikon, republished afresh in the last CPF volume II.1, 2023), many of the preliminary studies or editions prepared for the CPF have brought notable progress to the study of many authors. These include, for instance, Isocrates (STCPF vol. 12), Menandri Sententiae (text based on a new collation of all the manuscripts and the editions of previously unpublished recensions, edited by C. Pernigotti, STCPF, vol. 15) or the first edition of the Derveni Papyrus (T. Kouremenos, G. Parassoglou, K. Tsantsanoglou, STCPF, vol. 13) along with a groundbreaking and in-depth study on the Derveni roll by V. Piano (STCPF, vol. 18). The latest volume (STCPF, vol. 19, 2024) celebrates the 40th anniversary of the editorial Project «Corpus dei Papiri Filosofici» (CPF). This volume is organized into two sections. Alongside contributions commemorating the founding (with the original photos of the meeting held in Florence, 1983) and early development of the CPF – as a project deeply rooted in interdisciplinarity and scholarly collaboration – the first section includes papers presented in Florence on June 15 and 16, 2023. These papers focus on papyri attributed either to philosophical schools (such as the Epicureans) or to individual works (such as Hierocles' Ethical Elements), whose editions – published within the CPF – have served, and in many cases continue to serve, as reference editions for papyrologists and scholars of ancient philosophy worldwide. The second section of the volume features contributions devoted to other papyri of particular relevance to the editorial history of the CPF, such as Antiphon's De Veritate, the anonymous commentary to Plato's Theaetetus, and the unattributed stoic fragment on moral progress preserved in P.Mil.Voglino inv. 12411.
